

Utes take their claim on the Holy War

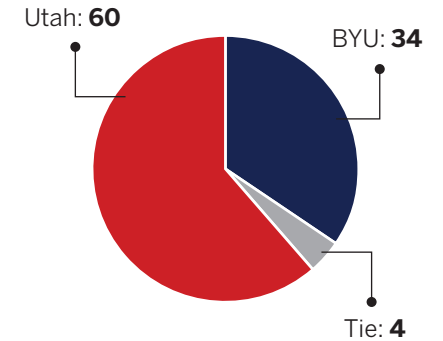

The Holy War, Brigham Young University (BYU) vs. the University of Utah (the U,) has been a time-honored rivalry in Utah since 1922. The two teams have been part of the same conferences up until 2011, when Utah became part of Pac-12, and BYU went independent. Knowing how much the rivalry means to their fans, the two teams have continued to play each other in the off-season, keeping the tradition alive.

NUMBER OF GAMES PLAYED BY LOCATION

Home versus away games can have an impact on how well a team plays. Utah has had more opportunities to play in their own stadium, and may have had an advantage in this area.

*In 1943, the two teams were on a WWII hiatus, but Utah resumed playing other teams in 1944. In '15 the two teams played in the Vegas Bowl by chance.
